

We

Vasanthi Vasudev

We sat in
The dwindling light
Along the sea
He & I ...

The sand was flooded
With shadows of twos
And the hazy moon
Gazed stealthily through.

Symbols of cosmic permanence,
The waves, lapped & lapped...
Hungrily at dusty grains
Time and again.

A serene silence
Sealed our bond, so eternal...
A perfect calm filled our core
Even as we shuffled
As never before.

Hands carefully glided
Away from each other,
While blessed feet
Struggled close under.

We spoke of
The years of yore,
Of childhood days,
Of escapades of youth.

We found ecstasy
In sharing our woes,
In singing our plaintiff
Over the hush of the waves.

We sat lost
In our little universe...
The lone beggar
Went away unseen;
The babble of tongues
Died away, unheard.

A wonderful peace
Besieged my heart
And conquered my Self.

I wished to sit
On and on
An entire lifetime...
Minute after minute,
Wave after wave.
